MR. POWERS INTERCEDES

In Behalf of Mattie Lomax a Negro Woman Who is Under Sentence of Death

President Taft Promised to Consider Commutation of Death Sentence; National Capital Aroused to Action.

The Washington (D. C.) Times of June 2nd contained a splendid picture of our noted and distinguished Representative in the National Congress and almost three columns of writeup concerning the interest he was taking in the case of Mattie Lomax, a negro woman under sentence of death in that city for the murder of her husband.

Mr. Powers' attention was attracted to the case by an editorial published in the Times of June 1st., and immediately began to take steps to have the sentence commuted to life imprisonment.

The Times' account of Mr. Powers in connection with the case is as follows: "Caleb Powers, Republican Representative in Congress from Kentucky, today made a personal appeal to President Taft to prevent the hanging, in this city of Mattie Lomax, the negroess convicted of murdering her husband and condemned to die July 31.

"There can be no doubt that Mr. Powers' plea for the wretched woman came from the heart. He himself was three times in shadow of the gallows. He was convicted on three trials for the murder of Governor Goebel of his State, but was later acquitted, went before his people for vindication and was elected to Congress.

"When the President had heard the reasons set forth by Mr. Powers why this woman should not be hanged—why no woman should be hanged in the Capital of the Republic, whether she be black or white—he promised the Congressman to take the case under consideration.

PRESIDENT PROMISES INQUIRY.

"The President went further. He indicated he would call upon the Department of Justice for a report on the conviction of the woman and would ask Attorney General for his opinion. Mr. Powers said he would gladly lay before the department reasons why it would be a national misfortune to hang this woman at the seat of Government. He will show what an influence such an execution would have on the remainder of the country.

"When seen, following his interview with the President, Mr. Powers said that he might be a little prejudiced with the general idea of capital punishment, but that he believed his reasons for asking a commutation to life imprisonment of the condemned woman are sound.

"I believe that it would be a stain upon our national honor," said Mr. Powers, "to permit such an execution as that about to be visited upon this woman. I do not know her. I never heard of her until a short time ago. I have not the remotest personal interest in her. Yet she is a woman and as such should not be hanged in Washington, however atrocious her deed may have been.

THINKS COMMUTATION PROPER.

"It is true that Mattie Lomax is a colored woman, but she is none the less a woman. I do not believe therefore that it would become our great Government to be responsible for such an execution. I do not think the ends of justice would be furthered by it. I do think the President could appropriately commute her sentence to life imprisonment.

"If no one else does it, I shall myself take the question of a commutation of sentence up with the Department of Justice, and present the petition for it. The President, of course, wants any petition to reach him through the Department of Justice. That is the regular channel for such matters."

"The Kentucky Congressman pointed out that Mattie Lomax was the first to be sentenced to the gallows by a civil court in the District of Columbia. Mrs. Surratt, who was found guilty of complicity in the murder of President Lincoln, was tried and convicted by a military court.

"Mr. Powers will first pay a visit to the woman herself, for he has not yet seen or talked with her, and his interest in her case developed only when he read for the first time since Mrs. Surratt was sentenced in 1865, has the death penalty been imposed on a woman in Washington.

WANTS LAWYERS TO ACT.

"I wish to talk the case over with the woman's lawyer or lawyers," said Mr. Powers. "It is fitting that they should be the active persons moving in the appeal, but I shall lend what influence I can toward a commutation of her sentence.

"If Mrs. Lomax's counsel are disinclined to take any further steps, I will appear as the principal pleader in her behalf myself."

The colored population of the District are deeply interested in the plea of The Times for a commutation of the sentence of hanging, and a concerted effort was begun last night to gather signatures to petitions for executive clemency.

Ministers, lawyers, and societies of colored women in the District are preparing the petitions, according to Attorney S. D. Pruitt, one of the attorneys for the defense at the Lomax trial.

Cuno H. Rudolph, chairman of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, is strenuously opposed to the execution of the death sentence against Mattie E. Lomax, who has been condemned to die for the murder of her husband.

To The Washington Times today Mr. Rudolph expressed himself vigorously on this subject, after having read the editorial concerning the Lomax case printed on the first page of The Times last evening. He is unalterably opposed to capital punishment, and declares that the infliction of the death penalty in the District of Columbia would be much more deplorable than its infliction in any State, for the reason that Washington is the Capital of the Nation, and that its laws are made by the representatives of all the people.

COMMISSIONER'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Rudolph is firm in the belief that the Lomax sentence should be commuted to life imprisonment. He believes that unless it is commuted the United States, as a nation, will stand forth before the civilized world as having given its approval to a barbaric, degrading form of punishment which he declares even organized society has not the moral right to inflict.

The statement of the chairman of the District Commission, given to The Times today, was this:

"I have been a firm opponent of capital punishment ever since I was a young man. I have failed to qualify for jury duty several times in murder cases because I do not believe society has the moral right to take human life. I therefore am unalterably opposed to the infliction of the death penalty in the case of Mattie Lomax."

"I do not know whether the woman was guilty or innocent, but I presume she had a fair trial, and that there is no reasonable doubt of her guilt. This, however, has nothing to do with the case.

"I would oppose capital punishment anywhere, and I am doubly opposed to it in the District of Columbia; first, because this is the National Capital, where no woman has been hanged for nearly half a century; and, second, because a hanging here means a hanging by the United States."

"The execution of a death sentence in Iowa or California is the outgrowth of the sentiment

Pleasant Outing Party.

Last Saturday afternoon a number of ladies and gentlemen constituted a party that enjoyed an outing on the river, about a mile below town on the Catron farm.

A lunch was taken along and the afternoon and evening was so enjoyably spent that the crowd never returned to town until almost nine o'clock.

Fishing, boating and bathing was the principle pastime of the party, which was given in honor of Mrs. S. E. Mahan, of Williamsburg, and Mrs. L. D. Sampson, of Chicago.

Those who made up the party, were, Mrs. Mahan, Mrs. L. D. Sampson, Judge and Mrs. F. D. Sampson and little daughter Helen, Mrs. O. C. McClung and little daughter Evelyn, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Steele, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lentz, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Barner, Misses Cora Severe and Maggie Sampson and Rev. E. H. Mathus.

BARBOURVILLE

Should Organize A Boosters Club

WE MUST ATTRACT ATTENTION

This is indeed an age of advertising and no business can be conducted successfully without advertising.

Just a few days ago the business men of Louisville spent $5,000 in money and about a week's time for more than one hundred men to go out through this and other parts of Kentucky and advertise their business. They claim that it was time and money well spent and that it will bring business into Louisville sufficient to repay them for the effort.

What has Barbourville ever done to boost her business or attract attention this way?

We have many valuable resources here and we know it, but we have not the means sufficient to develop them, and we are now sitting with arms folded and waiting for some one to come along and make the discovery and then set about to develop their discovery. We are not doing our duty. We should proclaim to the world what we have and then set about to interest capitalists to come here and invest their money and develop this country.

With the Cumberland river flowing right by our door, we have a supply of never failing water and with proper arrangement this stream can be harnessed and made to furnish power to turn the wheels of industry almost the entire year.

Besides we have an inexhaustible supply of the finest coal stored away on all sides of our city and ready to be mined whenever there is a demand for it. Besides we have a fine deposit of natural gas in quantities sufficient to meet almost any demands that might be made for its use.

With cheap fuel for power and with a fine growth of oak, chestnut and hickory timber throughout this country we can see no good reason why it would not be cheaper to establish a plant where the fuel and the material are both produced and there convert it into the manufactured article than to ship both the fuel and the timber two hundred miles to the city before it is converted into the manufactured article.

If Barbourville possessed one dozen men who were public spirited enough to join in a booster movement it would not take long to get factories and industries established here that would give a pay roll of from $5,000 to $10,000 per week in our city, and if we had a business of that kind then our merchants would be prosperous because at least 80 per cent of the pay roll would be spent among our merchants every week.

These being well known facts, why is it that we can not interest our business men and our merchants to start a "Boosters' Club" in Barbourville that will stand solidly together and continue to boost until the desired results are secured.

Who will start the movement to organize a boosters' club?

No Place For Young Men.

Champ Clark, at present Speaker of the National House of Representatives, in speaking of the evils of the saloon, said:—

"The saloon is no place for a young man who is ambitious to lead a clean, successful life. If he wishes to excel in crime, rob his mental and physical powers, consort with thugs, blacklegs, prostitutes, and thieves, be a disgrace to his family and a stench to his own nostrils, why, I'd advise him to frequent saloons."

BIG COAL COMPANY

Leases Property and Will Prepare to Begin Operation

Knox county continues to develop her unlimited mineral resources and the more that she develops the greater she becomes in the sisterhood of States.

The latest development to report is the following:

The Greasy Brush Coal Co., of this city has leased a part of their holdings on Greasy and Brush Creeks, about two miles above Warren on the Cumberland Railway, to the Brush Creek Coal Mining and Mfg. Co., of Tenn. The lessees will begin operations on the lease at once and expect to be shipping coal by the opening of the new year 1912.

This will be the second new operation to start on Brush Creek this year.

This company proposes to put in a plant that will have a capacity of 1250 tons daily, which will make it one of the most extensive plants in Southeastern Kentucky.

The Brush Creek section of Knox county is very rich in coal and this company has secured a fine boundary for operations and when sufficiently developed will employ a large force to make the output they propose.

Mine Inspector Cole in the Big Sandy District

Perry V. Cole, Assistant Inspector of Mines, left Sunday, the 4th, for the Eastern or Big Sandy District to work in that territory for a month or six weeks, Chief Inspector Norwood having decided it best to change the assistants for a short time, concluding that it would be better for the department and also educational for the Assistant Inspectors.

We are glad to see interest taken in the coal mines of this State by our people, as it is well known that coal mining is one of the greatest industries of our State and deserves the consideration and attention that is now being given it. Mr. Cole is a good coal man and is using his greatest efforts to get the mines under his jurisdiction in good condition. We understand that the Inspection Department now consists of six men, including the Chief Inspector, with head office at Lexington, and the law involves many duties other than inspecting the mines and with this extra work the present force is not sufficient to do justice to the work now required of them.

Mr. Cole has our best wishes for his success on this special trip.

TO MOVE HEADQUARTERS.

DIVISION OFFICERS OF L. & N. WILL BE MOVED TO CORBIN.

It is authentically reported that the Louisville and Nashville Railroad will shortly move its division offices from Middlesboro to Corbin. The transfers were begun last week and in all about forty officials will be transferred.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear sister, Mrs. Mary J. Wilson, wife of Thomas Wilson, of Rockhold, Kentucky. She departed this life on June 3rd, 1909, and leaves her husband and her parents and four brothers to mourn their loss of that dear one, whose task on earth was well done. She is two years gone, but never forgotten by her relatives and friends. By her brother,

FIRE SCARE

Aroused Many of Our Citizens at an Early Hour Tuesday Morning

Last Tuesday morning at 2.30 o'clock the alarm of fire was sounded and it was soon learned that it was the Costello Drug store and in a few minutes some two hundred or more people were gathered there ready to render any assistance in their power, but upon arriving they found the house full of smoke but could find no fire anywhere.

The search was kept up for some ten or fifteen minutes and finally Henry Bowman discovered the fire in a small wooden box in the stock room caused by the breaking of a half pint bottle of nitric acid which had ignited the wood shavings and would have eventually set the building on fire if it had not been discovered.

The nitric acid was ordered for Dr. Burnside and had been left at the drug store late the evening before and had not been delivered to him. It was fortunate that it was not however, for if it had been left in the office of Dr. Burnside, and no one near, it would have set the building on fire, as at the time it was found and opened the shavings were all afire and the inside of the box was burning, and in a short time would have burned entirely through, then a flame would soon have followed.

We are glad that the result was no worse than it was.

New Directors

At a meeting of the stockholders of the National Bank of John A. Black held in the directors' room on June 3rd, the already strong directorate was increased to ten, the new Directors being A. M. Decker, B. B. Golden, W. K. Marsee, Dr. S. C. Jones and W. B. Starke.

Death of Mrs. B. P. Walker.

News was received here last Thursday night to the effect that Mrs. Lillie Martin Walker, wife of B. P. Walker, of this city, had died in Roswell, New Mexico.

Mrs. Walker had been in failing health for some time, and had made a trip to Asheville, North Carolina, with the hope of regaining her health, but finding that she was not being benefited there she returned home, and later decided to go to New Mexico, hoping that she might find relief there, but the White Plague had fastened its fangs upon her vitals and no matter where she journeyed there was no relief to be found.

The remains arrived here Tuesday morning and were taken to her late residence and after funeral service, conducted by Rev. A. C. Hutson of the Baptist Church, at 12.30 p. m. Wednesday, after which they were taken to Williamsburg for interment in the cemetery there.

We extend to the bereaved husband and little orphan children, our heartfelt sympathy in the hour of sad bereavement.

May an Alwise Providence ever shelter, protect them and direct, so that the little ones may grow up to love and serve the God of their mother.

The Official Organ of the Republican Party in Knox County.

It seems that so long as poor old Joe Blackburn is alive he will harbor an enmity within his breast against Caleb Powers that was prompted more than eleven years ago because Joe imagined that his own political safety would be jeopardized unless the wish of the people of the State could be overthrown and the defeated candidates given the State offices instead of the rightfully elected ones.

Joe has always maintained an intense hatred toward the Mountains of Kentucky and especially the Eleventh District. It was he who said that he would "draw a line at the foot of the Mountains." That "the Mountain people did not act like the remainder of the State, did not look like them or think like them, and when they die they do not go to the same place."

It was Joe that induced Goebel to contest for the seat of Gov. Taylor although he knew at the time that Taylor, Powers and all the ticket was honestly elected, and after he had induced Goebel to contest the election for no other motive on earth except to keep Goebel out of his own way as a candidate for a seat in the United States Senate, he continued the agitation until Goebel lost his life as a consequence.

Then Blackburn again sought opportunity to cast a reflection upon the people of the highlands, branded and proclaimed the whole population of the Mountains as "RED-HANDED ASSASSINS AND CUT-THROATS" and called upon HELL to swallow up the entire Mountains, people and all.

The venom which he was then belching forth was prompted by a greedy desire for office and for that reason we have felt a little inclined to forgive and forget, thinking that these utterances were made at a time when he was so much under the influence of "John Barleycorn", that he perhaps was not wholly responsible for his words.

Joe has been honored many times by the Democratic party and after a life time he can not point to one single thing that he has ever done for his people that would stand as a monument of his greatness after he has passed off the stage of action.

After his own party had repudiated him he accepted an appointment from Mr. Roosevelt as Governor of the Panama Canal Zone and for a few years held that position, but through it all he has retained that enmity toward the Mountain people and toward Mr. Powers, whom he tried for eight long years to hang because Mr. Powers dared to oppose his attempt to rob the Republicans of the offices to which the people had elected them.

Mr. Powers has never asked for more than what was right and honest, he has never demanded any unfair or unjust discrimination against any part of the State. He has never asked that any special privileges be granted to the people of the Mountains of Kentucky, but on the other hand he has always demanded a square deal.

When he was arrested and incarcerated, charged with a crime of which Joe Blackburn was more responsible than he was himself, he demanded a fair deal and he fought it out along that line until finally the Governor of the State realized that it was impossible for him to get a fair deal, and also after a thorough examination of all the testimony, declared that Mr. Powers was altogether innocent of the charge and demanded that he be forthwith released.

When Mr. Powers was given his liberty the people of the Mountains, knowing him as they do, demanded that he represent them in the Halls of our National Congress. Mr. Powers did not seek this honor, but the people demanded it of him, and he said to them that they had always been so true, so loyal and so devoted to him that he could not refuse to obey their request, and for that reason entered the race and won a most surprising victory.

When inducted into office his very first move was an attempt to have his native State so divided that every section and every district would have equal representation in Congress. Is there anything wrong with such a request?

How does that compare with the statement made a few days ago by the much honored Joe Blackburn in a speech at Owensboro when he said he favored REDISTRICTING THE STATE SO AS TO MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR MORE THAN ONE REPUBLICAN TO BE ELECTED TO CONGRESS, and then gave utterance to the following:

"You saw the Eleventh Congressional district of Kentucky sending a thrice convicted, but unhung murderer to the Congress of the United States, and he is there now and I hope he will stay there for he is a fit representative of the people who sent him there."

Yes, we admit that Mr. Powers is a fit representative of the people who sent him to Congress, and he is representing them with much more credit to himself and honor to his district than did even the ingrate and defamer who gave utterance to the language quoted above.

Poor old Joe. Of all the men in Kentucky who should shrink from giving advice to the Mountain people as to who should represent them, he is the last. We are not asking him for advice and we do not propose to have him force his unsought advice upon us. The Mountain people are able to think for themselves and choose for themselves who shall represent them and their interests as was clearly demonstrated in the selection of Mr. Powers, and they will continue to keep him in Congress so long as he honestly and faithfully serves his people, without the advice or consent of Joe Blackburn or any of his cohorts.

Mr. Powers possesses the ability, not only to take care of the interests of his constituents, but to take care of his own interests, as was demonstrated when Blackburn and those who were associated with him, attempted to rob him of his office and assassinate his character.

Goebel, a murderer, untried for the cowardly crime of shooting down an honored and respected citizen and Confederate soldier and listening to the clamor of such men as Joe Blackburn whose heart is caloused with enmity and hatred and whose mind was befuddled with alcohol, was induced to attempt the crime of usurping the office of Governor of the great State of Kentucky and paid the penalty of his folly with his life.

Now we would like for Joe to tell us whether it is a greater crime to have a man to represent the Mountains in Congress who has been falsely accused of conspiracy in a murder, or to have a murderer usurp the office of Governor and overthrow the wish of the majority of the people and by usurpation take the office that the people had given to another.

If Joe has half as much sense as those who know him give him credit with having he will leave the Eleventh district undisturbed and if God in his infinite mercy should permit him to pass through the pearly gates he will find legions of Mountaineers congregated around the Great White Throne and ready to forgive him of all the enmity he has treasured up in his wicked breast against them.

Catch Crops and Cover Crops

A large supply of vegetable matter in the soil is absolutely necessary in the production of good crops. It not only gives to the soil the essential physical conditions, but the supply of soil nitrates is largely dependent upon its decay. In systems of farming where many of the products are sold and little stock is kept, it becomes difficult to keep the supply in the soil sufficient for the best results.

In the usual systems of rotation there are often opportunities between harvest time and seeding time of the crops employed in the rotation to plant some rapidly growing crop to be turned under to increase the supply of vegetable matter. Such crops are known as catch crops, and where they occupy the land during the winter also receive the name of cover crops. The use of such crops may add greatly to the producing power of the soil, while about the only expense involved is that of the seed. Cowpeas, soy beans, crimson clover, vetch, rye and in fact any crop adapted to the season, may be used for the purpose, but of course the leguminous crops are to be preferred as they also add nitrogen directly to the soil.

Cowpeas grow rapidly and if sown after wheat or oats are harvested will give a good growth of vines to plow under. They may also be sown in corn at the last cultivation and while not interfering with the growth of the corn at all, provide considerable green matter by the time the corn is ready to harvest. Where crimson clover will succeed it is a most valuable catch crop, as most of its growth takes place in fall and early spring. The common practice is to sow it in the corn, usually during August as the shade of the corn plants seem to protect the young clover and it will succeed better than if sown without a nurse crop. It will make considerable growth by the time the land is to be plowed in the spring and serves as a cover crop also. Crimson clover is a good nitrogen gatherer. Rye is undoubtedly the most popular catch crop, and justly so. It should be used in all cases where the land would otherwise lie bare through the winter, except in the case of fall plowed sod-land. It not only will add vegetable matter to the soil but will prevent the loss by leaching and washing of the plant food already there. It may furnish pasturage when the land is in such condition that tramping will not injure it, but it should not be allowed to grow too large in the spring before being turned under, or injury to the following crop may result. Crops of weeds may be turned under with good results frequently, but of course should never be allowed to seed. In fact every opportunity to add something to the soil in this way should be taken advantage of. Soils with plenty of humus and vegetable matter in them seldom fail to produce paying crops.

How the Soldiers Were Armed For the Civil War.

As for arms, the regiments came to the front with every conceivable kind and some with none at all. The regular infantry, what there was of it, had but recently given up the old smooth-bore musket for the Springfield rifle, caliber 58, with its paper cartridge and conical, counter-sunk bullet; but Harper's Ferry Arsenal had been burned, Springfield could not begin to turn out the number needed; Rock Island Arsenal was not yet built, and so in many a regiment flank companies, only, receive the rifle, the other eight using for months the old smooth-bore with its "buck and ball" cartridge, good for something within two hundred yards and for nothing beyond.

Even of these there were only a few regiments. Vast purchases, therefore, were abroad, England selling us her Enfields, with which the fine Vermont brigade was first armed, and France and Belgium parting with thousands of the huge, brass-bound, ponderous "carbine a tige"—the Belgian guns with a spike at the bottom to expand the soft leaden bullet when "rammed home." With this archaic blunderbus whole regiments were burdened, some foreign-born volunteers receiving it eagerly as "from the old country," and therefore superior to anything of Yankee invention. But their confidence was shortlived. One day's march, one short hour's shooting, ended all predilection for such a weapon.—From "The Volunteer Soldier of 1861," by General Charles King, U. S. V., in the American Review of Reviews for June.

ELECTRIC CHAIR VICTIM.

The Electric Chair will claim its first victim today, June 9th, the day set for the electrocution. The victim is furnished from Lebanon, Marion county, in the person of Jim Buckner, colored, who killed a policeman a few weeks ago. The "death dealer" arrived yesterday, when Capt. Depp brought in the new dynamo and generator, which are now being placed and connected with the electric chair.

There seem to be a shortage in the crop of June brides, a shortage in the pea crop and potatoes are far apart and, we fear, few in a bill.

Potato digging is made a positive pleasure by the invention of a Maine man who has devised a hoe to prevent backaches. It is a jointed affair arranged with springs that automatically tosses the potatoes into a bag or net as they are dug. From this invention it will be only a stem to equipping the hoe with electricity that will peel and fry the potatoes as they are tossed into the net. It means not only the elimination of backaches, but the emancipation of the over-worked hired girl. Maine is forging to the forefront of palpitating progress.

FROM FIRST PAGE.

of the people of those States only. In the District it is different. A hanging here would be taken to mean that the whole nation believes in legal murder as a punishment for murder. I do not think the nation believes any such thing.

"I am firmly of the opinion that a great majority of the people oppose capital punishment, and that a great majority would urge the commutation of the death sentence in the Lomax case if they could express themselves. If capital punishment—if the hanging of women—is to be permitted in Washington, the National Capital, what can be expected of the States. Such a thing here would be nothing short of a calamity. It would deter instead of encourage the rapidly spreading sentiment against capital punishment.

"Here in the Capital we should be setting an example of progress in government, in law, in customs, and in institutions for the whole people to follow. Instead, we will be leaving the people and going backwards if this death sentence is executed."

VIEWS ON RACE QUESTION.

Commissioner Rudolph was born and reared in Baltimore, and is a Southern man in his instincts and as a result of training and environment. His views of the Lomax case pertaining to the race question, and to the fact that Mattie Lomax is a negro, are therefore of interest. On this point, he said:

"The fact that Mattie Lomax is black instead of white has nothing to do with the question whether her death sentence should be executed, as I see it. I favor commutation of her sentence because I'm against capital punishment wherever it is, and because I am doubly opposed to it in the District, for the reasons stated. It makes no difference whether the victim be white, black or yellow—I'm opposed to the practice just the same. The fact that this woman is black should make no difference in any movement for the commutation of her sentence. It is the sentence that is abhorrent. The color of the skin has nothing to do with it. I would oppose the death sentence with exactly the same vigor if the victim were a black man, a white man, or a white woman."

Aside from the human side of the present case, Mr. Rudolph would like to see the Lomax sentence modified for the example it would offer the rest of the country.

EXAMPLE TO OTHERS.

On this point, he said: "I was glad to learn from The Times editorial that so many States have abolished capital punishment. Five are perhaps not many when you consider how many States there are in the Union, but the fact that five have acted indicates a growing sentiment against killing human beings by legal machinery.

"I believe the commutation of the Lomax sentence would be a powerful incentive to the rest of the States. If it did not result in immediate legislation, I think it would be certain to have a good influence on governors, by encouraging them to take the action which the President took where he had the power.

"I am glad of the opportunity offered by the invitation of The Times to express myself on the Lomax case and on capital punishment as a broad question. I am opposed to it, as a private citizen and as a Commissioner of the District of Columbia, and I do not hesitate to say so, both as a private citizen and as a Commissioner. I hope the Lomax sentence will be modified."

Who Was There That You Knew?

IN the shadowy ranks of those who marched to defeat or death or victory fifty years ago in the mighty conflict that convulsed this great nation, is there father or grandfather or uncle of yours? Would you like to see a photograph of him in that long ago day of his youth—a photograph that he never knew was taken? Perhaps we can show you one; and in any case, we can tell you a story, stranger than any detective fiction, of 3,500 priceless photographs that were lost and are found again.

3,500 Long Buried Photographs of the Civil War

THEY were taken by the greatest photographer in the United States of that day; they were bought by the United States Government for $50,000; they were buried in the War Department for 50 years—they are buried there still. But a duplicate set was kept by the photographer who died poor and broken down; that duplicate set was knocked from pillar to post for nearly 50 years, until it was discovered by a New England collector. J. Pierpont Morgan tried to secure the collection—Ex-President Garfield and General Benjamin F. Butler said it was worth $150,000—yet with the help of the Review of Reviews, the entire collection has been gathered into 10 great volumes and is placed within your reach at less than the value of one of the photographs. It is the most accurate, impartial history of the Civil War—the camera cannot lie. It tells the story of the War you never heard before. Taken under protection of the Secret Service, these photographs bring to light thousands of little-known phases of the war; they penetrate to strange places and record strange things.
